A Fundação Ditchley

O relatório de atividades do IFRI de 2001 mencionou um colóquio sobre as relações transatlânticas que ocorreu no castelo de Canisy de 29 de junho a 1 de julho de 2001. Estavam, entre outros, presentes: Hubert Védrine, então ministro das Relações Exteriores, Édouard Balladur e Richard Perle, conselheiro no Pentágono.

Institut Français des Relations Internationales
RAPPORT D'ACTIVITÉ 2001

• Transatlantic Relations : Cooperation and Competitition

Ifri/Ditchley,
Château de Canisy,
29 juin-1er juillet

Dominique Moïsi

Cette rencontre, organisée en partenariat avec la Ditchley Foundation (Royaume-Uni), par Sir Nigel Broomfield, Ditchley, et Dominique Moïsi, Ifri, avait pour objectif d'évaluer l'état des relations transatlantiques dans leur dimension économique et politico-stratégique. Elle a bénéficié de la présence de deux anciens Premiers ministres, co-présidents de la conférence, Édouard Balladur et John Major, et de celle du ministre des Affaires étrangères, Hubert Védrine. Elle a rassemblé des délégations française – conduite par Thierry de Montbrial –, britannique, canadienne et américaine.

Denis de Kergorlay, hôte de la réunion au château de Canisy, John Major, ancien Premier ministre de Grande-Bretagne, Hubert Védrine, ministre des Affaires étrangères, Sir Nigel Broomfield, président de la Ditchley Foudation et Thierry de Montbrial, Ifri.

Les participants sont allés au cœur des causes des tensions transatlantiques – alimentées selon les uns par les signaux confus adressés par l'Europe, par le syndrome américain de superpuissance selon les autres. Il a été convenu qu'en raison de la complexité des deux "systèmes", européen et américain, une approche sophistiquée était requise, notamment pour battre en brèche des perceptions mutuelles souvent émotionnelles. Dans le domaine économique, les participants ont reconnu que, si la culture des shareholders n'était pas bien établie en Europe à certaines exceptions près (capitalisme rhénan), les convergences entre les systèmes économiques avaient

http://www.ifri.org/?page=rapport-d_activite

Esse colóquio foi organizado por uma organização globalista britânica pouco conhecida: a Ditchley Foundation.

O mesmo relatório do IFRI publicou uma foto onde podemos ver Denis de Kergorlay, anfitrião no castelo de Canisy, ao lado de John Major, ex-primeiro-ministro britânico, de Hubert Védrine (membro do Siècle, da Comissão Trilateral e do grupo Bilderberg), de Thierry de Montbrial e de Sir Nigel Broomfield, presidente da Ditchley Foundation.

"Governança global", "globalização", "segurança", "perigos e ameaças do crescimento demográfico"* ou ainda *"degradação do meio ambiente", esses eram os temas, caros aos globalistas, que foram abordados durante esse colóquio.

http://www.ditchley.co.uk/page/244/transatlantic-relations.htm

A Fundação Ditchley (Ditchley Foundation) é uma organização britânica totalmente privada fundada em 1958 por Sir David Wills. Ela está localizada na Ditchley House, perto de Chipping Norton, Oxfordshire, e tem como objetivo original desenvolver as relações internacionais entre a Grã-Bretanha e os Estados Unidos. Hoje, porém, inclui em suas discussões representantes de diferentes países.

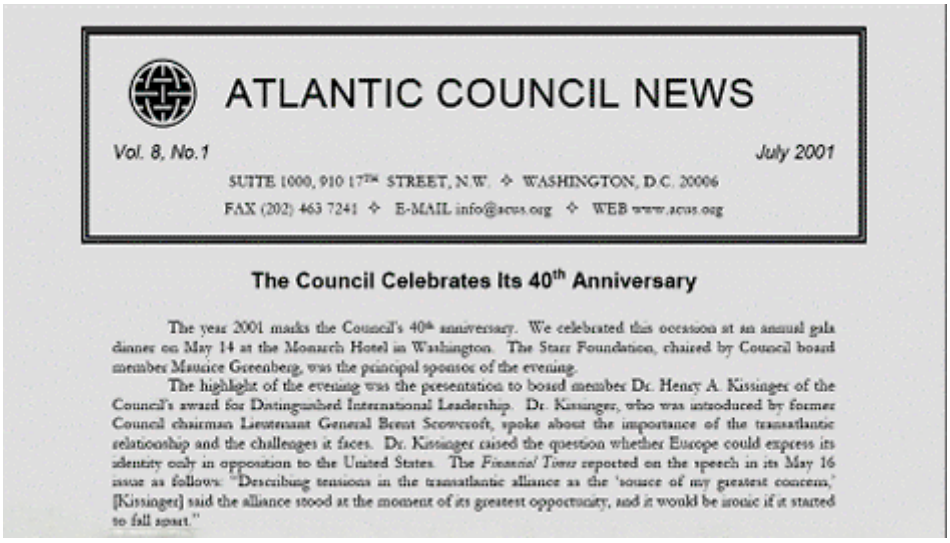

http://www.ditchley.co.uk/

Atualmente dirigida pelo ex-primeiro-ministro inglês John Major, a Ditchley Foundation reúne quinze vezes por ano, em segredo, empresários, políticos, jornalistas e altos responsáveis da OTAN no Castelo Ditchley, na Inglaterra. Sua filial americana é dirigida por Richard Gardner, ex-embaixador dos Estados Unidos na Itália.

Para mais informações, anexamos no anexo 2 os fac-símiles das páginas do livro Maçonnerie et sectes secrètes de Epiphanius que tratam da Ditchley Foundation.

O documento abaixo demonstra as conexões que existem entre os representantes das mais altas instâncias globalistas (notadamente Henry Kissinger, nomeado – cf. abaixo – conselheiro político do Vaticano por Bento XVI em 2006!) e esse tipo de organizações satélites que são a Ditchley Foundation ou o IFRI.

ATLANTIC COUNCIL NEWS

Vol. 8, No.1 — July 2001

SUITE 1000, 910 17TH STREET, N.W. ✧ WASHINGTON, D.C. 20006

FAX (202) 463 7241 ✧ E-MAIL info@acus.org ✧ WEB www.acus.org

The Council Celebrates Its 40th Anniversary

The year 2001 marks the Council's 40th anniversary. We celebrated this occasion at an annual gala dinner on May 14 at the Monarch Hotel in Washington. The Starr Foundation, chaired by Council board member Maurice Greenberg, was the principal sponsor of the evening.

The highlight of the evening was the presentation to board member Dr. Henry A. Kissinger of the Council's award for Distinguished International Leadership. Dr. Kissinger, who was introduced by former Council chairman Lieutenant General Brent Scowcroft, spoke about the importance of the transatlantic relationship and the challenges it faces. Dr. Kissinger raised the question whether Europe could express its identity only in opposition to the United States. The Financial Times reported on the speech in its May 16 issue as follows: "Describing tensions in the transatlantic alliance as the 'source of my greatest concern,' [Kissinger] said the alliance stood at the moment of its greatest opportunity, and it would be ironic if it started to fall apart."

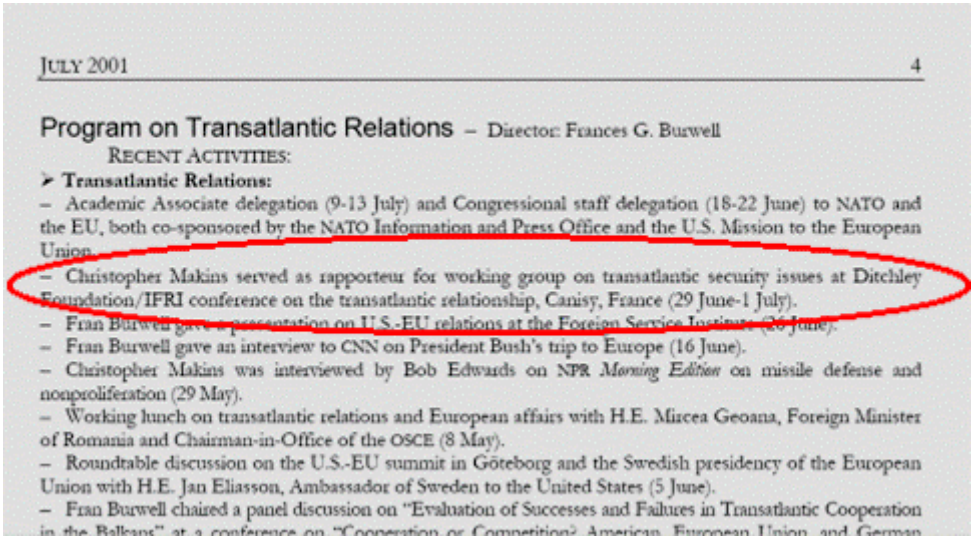

Chairman Henry E. Catto made commemorative remarks highlighting the Council's four decades of promoting constructive bipartisan U.S. leadership and engagement in international affairs based on the central role of the Atlantic community in the contemporary world.

Over 400 guests attended the celebration, including many of the Council's corporate sponsors and individual members. The guests also included senior officials from the U.S. Administration, Congressional and military leaders, and many members of the Washington diplomatic community. The evening ended with dancing to music by the Wright Touch.

Ambassador Catto, Dr. Kissinger, General Scowcroft, and Mr. Makins with the Council's Distinguished International Leadership Award

Dr. Henry A. Kissinger

JULY 2001 4

Program on Transatlantic Relations – Director: Frances G. Burwell

RECENT ACTIVITIES:

➢ Transatlantic Relations:

– Academic Associate delegation (9-13 July) and Congressional staff delegation (18-22 June) to NATO and the EU, both co-sponsored by the NATO Information and Press Office and the U.S. Mission to the European Union.

– Christopher Makins served as rapporteur for working group on transatlantic security issues at Ditchley Foundation/IFRI conference on the transatlantic relationship, Canisy, France (29 June-1 July).

– Fran Burwell gave a presentation on U.S.-EU relations at the Foreign Service Institute (26 June).

– Fran Burwell gave an interview to CNN on President Bush's trip to Europe (16 June).

– Christopher Makins was interviewed by Bob Edwards on NPR Morning Edition on missile defense and nonproliferation (29 May).

– Working lunch on transatlantic relations and European affairs with H.E. Mircea Geoana, Foreign Minister of Romania and Chairman-in-Office of the OSCE (8 May).

– Roundtable discussion on the U.S.-EU summit in Göteborg and the Swedish presidency of the European Union with H.E. Jan Eliasson, Ambassador of Sweden to the United States (5 June).

– Fran Burwell chaired a panel discussion on "Evaluation of Successes and Failures in Transatlantic Cooperation in the Balkans" at a conference on "Cooperation or Competition? American, European Union, and German

http://www.acus.org/docs/0107-Atlantic_Council_Newsletter.pdf

---

Revision #3
Created 15 November 2024 07:36:24 by Admin
Updated 15 November 2024 14:44:55 by Admin